STEP 1: SCHEDULE AND CALENDAR DECISIONS

Good planning is key to a successful Families Together in Nature gathering. Set a schedule that works for you and your family. Are you interested in hosting a single event or ongoing events each week, month or season? Plan each event well in advance and be aware of other local activities that may affect people’s ability to attend. It’s also important to let people know how long they should plan for your event; is it a half-day hike or two hours of exploration at dusk?

PLANNING GUIDE

HOW OFTEN:
Once a week on ________________________ (day) ________________________
The first ____ (day) ____ of each month
The first ____ (day) ____ of each season
Once a year on ________________________ (date) ________________________

HOW LONG:
From ____ (month) ____ to ____ (month) ____

THINGS TO CONSIDER:
- Consider your local landscape and seasonal weather conditions.
- Find out what other outdoor or nature events take place in your region.
- Gather a list of local nature clubs and other resources and find out whether educators or special guests are available to speak to your club while you are out.
- Consider places you’ve been and places you’ve always wanted to explore; include your favorite activities.

CREATE A LIST OF POSSIBLE OUTINGS:

With each outing you choose, there are several factors to plan and consider before you begin. Below is a checklist to help you think through the many factors involved with planning an outing. These considerations will vary according to your location, experience and conditions.

LOCATION LOGISTICS:
- Travel time to location: ____________________________
- Convenient meeting location: ____________________________
- Food, water, restroom facilities: yes / no, details: ____________________________
- Fees: ____________________________
- Adequate parking for a large group: Yes / No
- Need permission for groups over 10: Yes / No
- Nearby public transportation options: ____________________________

TYPE OF HIKE/LOCATION:
- Loop hike
- Out and back
- Easy
- Moderately rigorous
- Seasonal features: ____________________________
- Water feature: lake, stream, pond or puddles ____________________________
- Clothing considerations for this destination: ____________________________
- Educational opportunities: ____________________________
- Accessibility features: ____________________________
- Possible safety or accessibility issues (small children, elderly, all, etc): ____________________________

PLAN FOR INCLEMENT WEATHER:
- Alternate meeting location: ____________________________
- Alternate activity: ____________________________

OTHER CONSIDERATIONS:
______________________________
If you’re feeling more ambitious, consider longer hikes, nature photography expeditions, fishing trips, cookouts, camping trips and nature restoration projects. Learn to track animals, explore local fossil beds, go birding, or start a neighborhood garden. See the rest of this Tool Kit for more details. It is fun! “Do It Yourself! Do It Now!”

“You don’t have to wait for a ‘green play’ prescription from your doctor. You can start today with family and friends by opening the door to go outside to explore the wealth of natural adventures right in your own backyard, neighborhood and community.”

If you’re reading this document, you’re probably already giving some serious thought to starting your own Nature Club for Families. Are you willing to give it a try? According to our experts, being organized, enthusiastic, and committed to sharing nature with families will take you very far in being a successful group leader. And don’t worry if you’re not an expert naturalist: many leaders say they think their own lack of expertise makes other parents feel more comfortable taking part in their outdoor excursions. On the other hand, you don’t have to do it alone. One approach to starting a Nature Club for Families is to partner with another family member or friend. Consider enlisting grandparents—they are often a fount of knowledge about nature, and they have the time and resources that parents sometimes find in short supply.

Once you’re ready, start with nearby nature—places and spaces that are in your neighborhood or nearby in the community. You will be surprised how interesting your local parks can be—whether you’re exploring an urban center, a suburb, or a rural region. Schedule a variety of fun outdoor activities and invite others to join you. You might simply take your group on a series of one- or two-hour walks through familiar preserves (and you might be surprised at how few families have ever visited them before). Don’t be afraid to make repeated trips to the same location: Your group will gain confidence and knowledge as they begin to see a place over many days and seasons. Finally, remember to move slowly and allow the young people to romp and make their own discoveries. You’ll probably find that their learning and their appreciation come in ways you never anticipated.

It’s useful to connect with the park manager or agency that manages the locations you’ll be visiting. Tell them your plans and request permission to hold your outing at their location, especially if the group is large. Provide information about the benefits they’ll receive as a host site.

Use these prompts to craft your message before you mail, email or call, then log any pertinent notes below.

STEP 4: GET THE WORD OUT!

There’s no “right” size for a Families Together in Nature Group; choose what works best for you. Start with your existing networks of friends, family, neighbors and co-workers. There are lots of great ways to spread the word, including these listed below. Add notes to take these ideas further.

WAYS TO INVITE OTHERS TO JOIN | NOTES
--- | ---
1. Share your group’s plans on social media. |
2. Visit parenting websites and blogs in your region to get on their calendars and in their newsletters. |
3. Contact the host of other groups, like your local REI or other outdoor recreation store, neighborhood association or homeowners’ association, your school’s PTA, scouting groups, 4-H clubs and church groups. |
4. Post a flyer at the library, recreation centers or outdoor sports and camping supply stores. |

Age-appropriate risk-taking is good for children’s healthy development but keeping everyone safe is a critical part of your outing.

- BE PREPARED: Bee stings, poisonous plants and allergies don’t have to hold you back. Make sure to bring a first-aid kit and let everyone know where it is.

- SET EXPECTATIONS: Remind participants that the natural world is full of surprises and paying attention is part of getting to know nature.

- USE THE BUDDY SYSTEM: Group families with similarly-aged kids together so they can adjust activities to fit their ability level.

There are many good resources for safety tips in the outdoors. Review your plans in advance of your outing and always bring appropriate first-aid supplies. When you announce the event, make sure to mention any special supplies that people should bring or safety precautions they should consider. If your group will be near water, suggest a change of clothes. If you are hiking in the woods, encourage tick checks. Consider inviting a CPR trained participant.

The day is here. Time to enjoy the outdoors! After all the planning, you want to make sure the day of goes smoothly. Here is a list of things to bring, forms to sign, and reminders—everything you need to build community and enjoy the many proven benefits of nature.

- SIGN-IN SHEET: Having participants sign in can help you in future marketing efforts or help if you need head counts during the event.

- PHOTO RELEASE FORM: If you plan to take pictures and use them in your marketing, you must get permission from participants who may appear in those photos by having them sign and date a release form.

- LIABILITY WAIVER FORM: Beyond bee stings, scraped knees and poison ivy, accidents do happen. Have participants sign a liability waiver, which is a common practice for outdoor events involving young children. Some organizations and venues provide liability insurance to groups visiting their property. That kind of arrangement can be very helpful to your Families Together in Nature Group.

- COMMENT AND SUGGESTION FORM: Gather comments and input from participants after the event to help in planning the next one. Online surveys work well too!

THINGS TO BRING:

- Pens and pencils
- All forms for participants to sign
- Special equipment needed for the day’s activities (field guides, nets, magnifying glass, etc.)
- Extra water and snacks
- First-aid kit
- A list of housekeeping announcements for the beginning of event, including reminders such as: requiring that parents and guardians stay with their children, where bathrooms are, the route map, etc.
- A team of Leads. A couple of people working together can make the event run more smoothly. Make it a family affair or ask a friend to help lead.
- Energy, curiosity and joy!
You’ll want to spread the word about your upcoming events, share tips and stories about your adventures and keep everyone informed and inspired. The best way is to create a social media group (such as Facebook), a website or blog to share news, schedules, stories and ideas. You know your community best so maximize what works in your area. That may include printed flyers, events in community calendars and notices in school or church newsletters. Ask your friends and other parents for tips on how they learn about events in your community.

MARKETING ENGAGEMENT TIPS:

Marketing doesn’t have to consist of only ads and flyers; a lot of great marketing comes in the form of relational engagement. Using a platform like a Facebook Group can build community with your group in real-time. Here are some ways you can easily grow your group’s engagement:

- Post weekly ideas of places that might be of interest for future events. By observing the likes and comments, you’ll see which places intrigue the most people.

- Post articles or resources from the Children & Nature Network website (childrenandnature.org) or Families Together in Nature Trailhead group (childrenandnature.org/trailhead) that reinforce the link between health and nature for families and children.

- Ask kids to post drawings from past events.

- Ask parents to post videos of their family reflecting on what they liked best about an event.

- Ask parents (and/or kids) to reflect on different prompts such as What was your favorite childhood memory in nature? What was the most amazing animal you’ve seen in the wild?
